CONDO CRAZE

WEST PALM BEACH'S SKYLINE CLIMB IS IN HIGH GEAR

BY SKYE SHERMAN

A wave of waterfront towers is helping to transform West Palm Beach's North Flagler Drive into what some are calling "Billionaires' Corridor." But the luxury residential boom isn't confined to the waterfront, with projects like Nora House and Mr. C Residences illustrating the growing demand for amenity-rich urban living even west of the water.

"Over the past several years, we've made strategic investments in public safety, infrastructure, parks, mobility, and quality of life that have helped position West Palm Beach as one of the country's most desirable places to live," says West Palm Beach Mayor Keith A. James. "The interest we're seeing from world-class residential developers is a testament to that momentum and reinforces our vision of building a vibrant, thriving city for generations to come."

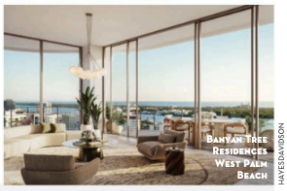

So why are ultra-high-net-worth buyers clamoring to spend up to $50 million for condos in West Palm, the city originally meant to house those building higher-profile Palm Beach?

"They're getting the best of all worlds: a luxury, lock-and-leave lifestyle with resort-level amenities in a city that has emerged as a major financial and business hub," says Kendall Corso, director of luxury sales at Douglas Elliman and sales executive at Banyan Tree Residences West Palm Beach. "Palm Beach remains highly constrained, particularly when it comes to new construction, and building a custom home or undertaking a major renovation can take years. Instead, many buyers are looking just across the bridge and finding exceptional value, brand-new products, and a more effortless way to live."

Here, we present a snapshot of some of the developments redefining West Palm's waterfront and beyond.
